New Staff Introductions

IPFW Career Services has hired five fabulous part-time student employees to meet our students’ career development needs. Kendra, Andrea and MacKenzie are our career peers. They can provide advice on writing résumés, preparing for interviews, and choosing a major. Our career peers also can help students learn how to effectively use JobZone and other online resources. They have been trained by our professional career development staff to assist with special events such as our job fairs, conduct many of our drop-in sessions (Monday–Friday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.), and provide behind-the-scenes clerical support. Each career peer specializes in working with a different group of students. Kendra works with Education and Public Policy students, MacKenzie works with the College of Visual and Performing Arts, and Andrea works with General Studies students.

In addition to our undergraduate student employees, we have hired two new graduate assistants, Kayla and Lynne. Kayla works with our career development team. In addition to fulfilling the same responsibilities as our career peers, Kayla conducts longer one-on-one appointments with our students and alumni, co-teaches our undergraduate career development classes, and has been instrumental in coordinating our Externship Program. Lynne is our newest student employee and works with our employer relations team. Her primary responsibilities include maintaining our performance management dashboard, gathering data, data analysis, and using the data to make informed decisions and assisting with outreach to employers.

For more information on all of our employees check out the Career Services website. We are very proud of our student ambassadors and know they will do a great job representing IPFW and the Office of Career Services.
