Quincy Recycle is one of the fastest-growing providers of recycling services in the Midwest, with four business units comprised of Quincy, Ill.; Alsip (Chicago), Ill.; and New Haven, Ind., plants, along with a brokerage business unit. Quincy Recycle's main objectives are to provide business-to-business recycling and waste reduction solutions.

Quincy's brokerage business was established in 1978 and the company has established outlets for recycled paper, plastic, and metals throughout the United States, China, and India. This unit allows the company to provide sustainable solutions to suppliers throughout North America as well as allowing competitive pricing based on global demand.

Quincy Recycle's original processing facility was established in 1974 and serves the Illinois, Missouri, and Iowa markets. With more than 200,000 square feet of operating space, live rail access on the Norfolk Southern line, two high production balers, and roll processing capabilities, Quincy is in prime position to meet the recycle needs of northeast Indiana businesses.
