Dear faculty and staff,

First, I want to thank you for all of the good work you do for this campus, and in particular, for our students. Your ongoing kindness, care, and commitment are evident in so many ways in the various schools and departments around campus.

As vice chancellor for advancement, I have the opportunity to think strategically on behalf of our university and search for ways to make IPFW a place of even greater success for our students and our region. Together, we can change the future of IPFW.

It takes a real team effort to move to the next step of excellence. Programs need to be funded. Great research needs support. Students need scholarships. And each of you sees those needs every single day. When we give to our own university, we send the message that we believe in what we are doing and where we can go—regardless of the amount each one of us donates. There are many ways you can support our university and our students. Be sure to visit our webpage ipfw.edu/common-goal to learn more about different giving opportunities and our initiative, Common Goal.

For annual giving of $1,000 or more, you receive membership into the Chancellor’s Society, which includes an invitation to the yearly Celebrate Philanthropy banquet, invitations to Omnibus dinners, and other special events.

Gifts to IPFW are deductible as charitable contributions within the limits of the Internal Revenue Code. Indiana tax payers are eligible for a 50% tax credit for gifts up to $400 on joint returns or $200 on individual returns. This is a great opportunity to consider when you give.

As we enter this holiday season, I want to again thank you for your support of our university and our students. Everyone makes an impact. You have the opportunity to choose yours now when you give through Common Goal.

Sincerely,

Angie Fincannon
Vice Chancellor for Advancement
